What is Russian Make?

Perfection in every detail

"Russian make" diamonds are manufactured according to optimal, mathematically calculated proportions, maximally close to parameters, offered by Marcel Tolkovsky. That gives Smolensk polished diamonds the unique brilliance shining. These diamonds are so valued all over the world because Russian make is a quality without compromise.

Here you can see some main requirements to the "Russian Make" diamonds:

- The main characteristic of "Russian make" diamonds is a clear, equal and so called "frosted" girdle.
- One more characteristic of the flawless "Russian make" diamond quality is a culet absence. Pavilion facets come to one point lying at the diamond symmetry axis.
- Rib line at the "Russian make" diamonds should be clear and should come to the point. It is not permitted an availability of additional rib lines, visible under the tenfold magnification.
- A surface of the polished facets should be flat, polished carefully. It is not permitted to leave at the facet surface the tracks of the graphitization, kerfs, scratches and other tracks of polishing, visible under the tenfold magnification.
- It is required that the culet was located on a diamond symmetry axis.
